Sponsored by Yale's Office of LGBTQ Resources

Black Trans People are Sacred

A Black Trans & Gender Nonconforming Storytelling Event

Storytellers:

ASHIA AJANI

Ashia Ajani (they/she) is a queer environmental educator and storyteller hailing from Denver, CO [Queen City of the Plains]. They are a Master’s of Environmental Management candidate at Yale School of the Environment and devoted cat parent to their sweet baby Cholula.

D.L. CORDERO

D.L. Cordero is a published fantasy author, occasional poet, and horror dabbler living and working in Denver, Colorado. As a nonbinary, queer, Afro-latinx and Taíno person (Puerto Rico), they write intriguing stories that center characters from marginalized communities, and explore transformative healing through the medium of poetry.

TY COOPER

Tyrell Cooper is a black non-binary person from Virginia. They have spent the last five years splitting time between academia and activism, with each space being crucial to the development and shape of their personal and political views. Using this knowledge and experience, Tyrell has created spaces that cultivate community and support amongst Black Queer folks.

Register Here:
lgbtq.yale.edu/storytelling

Friday, February 5th
7pm - 8:30pm EST